CALIBRATION
& REPAIR

FAST Solutions Lockers provide controlled access to needed assets, while allowing you to manage your maintenance and calibration programs.

In 2016,
we saved customers over $12,000,000
through repair and calibration

Fastenal's A2LA Accredited Calibration Lab manages over 23,000 measuring devices internally across the globe for our manufacturing centers, testing labs and numerous store locations. Fastenal fully understands the importance of proper calibration and traceability, and has the experience necessary to meet these demands.

One of the best ways to help your business manage the calibration schedules is through our FAST Solutions® Vending systems.

- » Asset Management
- » The ability to check in and categorize an item as broken
 - › Triggers the store to pick up and send in for repair
- » The ability to lock down items for calibration based on duration of time or number of uses
 - › Triggers the store to pick up and send in for service

FASTEN-ATING FACT

THE ORIGINAL FASTENAL CAR

Today, when we refer to the "Fastenal car," most people think of Ricky Stenhouse Jr.'s No. 17 Ford. But back in 1967, the only Fastenal car was a used Cadillac owned by our co-founder and original employee, Van McConnon, who packed the cavernous trunk and interior with boxes of fasteners to make deliveries to our earliest customers.

At first glance it was an impressive vehicle, dripping with chrome and ornamented with a pair of soaring tail fins. But its perfectly smooth body belied the fact that the frame had been badly bent in a traffic accident so that the front end jutted out to the left, creating an alarming illusion on the road. "It looked like I was making a perpetual left turn," recalled Van. "Oncoming drivers would wonder what the heck was going on. They'd slow down or even pull over to the side until I passed."

Yes, it's been a long road from Van's crooked Caddy to the No. 17 Ford, but as NASCAR fans will attest, the "Fastenal car" still has a penchant for making left turns.
